Rationale: The minor in History allows students to take courses from other programs and departments. To ensure that a student minoring in History complete a majority of the minor with history courses the department has approved, with a vote (27 favor/unanimous; 0 oppose; 0 abstain on August 31, 2015), to add the same sentence that is already included in the “Science, Medicine, and Technology” minor which states that “no more than two may be courses outside the Department of History” to the minor areas below. This will make the minor requirements more consistent for all seven minors. There is no need to include this phrase for the Asian or Latin American minors as there is only one alternative course that could count toward this minor from another program.

Current Catalog Text:

MORE than one hundred courses in the Department of History are available to Vanderbilt undergraduates. Some focus on a particular historical period, others on a particular region of the world, and still others on topics that may cross traditional chronological and geographical boundaries. The department is committed to the principle that in a changing world, the way we learn about the past must also change. It will continue to develop new courses for the twenty-first century, with an emphasis on those that recognize the interconnections among the various civilizations and regions of the globe.

Unless indicated otherwise in the course description, history courses have no prerequisite. Except for History 3980, 4960, 4980–4981, and 4999, courses numbered below 5000 are open to all majors and nonmajors. History 4960 is limited to seniors and juniors who have previously taken History 3000W. History 3980, 4980–4981, and 4999 are limited to students who have been admitted to the History Honors Program.

Students will find that the study of history offers not only a strong foundation for a liberal education but also a means of understanding the contemporary world. The skills developed in gathering, assessing, and synthesizing information have wide application in many careers, including business and the professions.

The Department of History offers a major and minor in history and, in cooperation with the Department of Economics, a joint major in economics and history, which is described in this catalog under Economics and History.

NOTE: New course numbers took effect in fall 2015. Former course numbers are included in course descriptions in this catalog and at this website: registrar.vanderbilt.edu/faculty/course-renumbering/course-lookup/.

Program of Concentration in History

The major program requires a minimum of 30 credit hours in history; no more than 3 credit hours of AP or IB credit may count toward this total. Note: AP and IB credit will not count toward the 15 credit hours for the concentration.

Course work is distributed as follows:

1. 3000W or 3980 (3 credit hours)
Note: 3000W should be taken as soon as possible and must be taken no later than the second semester of the junior year. 3000W is a prerequisite for the 4960 capstone course. 3980 is limited to second-semester juniors who have been admitted to the Honors Program. Students entering the Honors Program who have already taken 3000W will receive elective credit for that course.
2. Five courses in one of the following concentrations (15 credit hours):
A. Asia
B. Latin America
C. Europe
D. Early America and the United States
E. Middle East and Africa
F. Global and Transnational
G. Science, Medicine, and Technology
H. Comparative History/Special Topics

See below for a list of courses that count for Concentrations A, B, C, D, E, F, and G. Students choosing concentration H must have the approval of their adviser and the director of undergraduate studies for a specific program of study. First-Year Writing Seminars (1111) in history may be used to satisfy the relevant program concentration with approval of the director of undergraduate studies.

Program G. Science, Medicine, and Technology

Students may meet the requirement by taking five courses from the SMT list, among which not more than two may be courses outside the Department of History.

1470, 1480, 1500, 1510, 1520, 2160, 2780, 2800, 2810, 2830, 3030, 3040, 3045W, 3050, 3070W, 3110, 3230, and, as appropriate, 3746, 3850, 3882, 3883, 3890, 3980, 4960, 4980–4981, and 4999; Anthropology 4373; Asian Studies 2630; Astronomy 2130; English 3720 or 3720W; Mathematics 3000; Medicine, Health, and Society 2110, 2310, 2320, 2430; and other courses, as appropriate, with approval of the director of undergraduate studies.

3. Capstone course (3–6 credit hours)

One of the following, to be taken in the junior or senior year; all of the options will require the student to write a major paper. Any capstone course within the student’s area of concentration will count toward the five-course requirement for that concentration.

Option 1: 3883, Internship Research (3 credit hours).

Must be taken in conjunction with 3880 (internship training). Prerequisite: 3000W. Note: a student may take 3883 as an elective before completing 3000W but in this case 3883 will not count as a capstone course.

Option 2: 4960, Majors Seminar (3 credit hours).

Prerequisite: 3000W.

Option 3: 4980–4981, Senior Honors Seminar (6 credit hours).

Limited to seniors in the History Honors Program. Note: At the discretion of the director of honors and the director of undergraduate studies, a student who has taken 4980 but does not take 4981 may be considered to have fulfilled the capstone requirement for the major.

4. Electives (6–12 credit hours, depending on the nature of the capstone course)

Honors Program

The Honors Program in History is a three-semester program of study. It offers superior undergraduate history majors a program of advanced reading, research, and writing. The Honors Program combines seminar work and independent study under the supervision of a thesis adviser. This structure provides participants an introduction to historical research and writing, as well as the opportunity to study defined areas of history and significant historical problems that accord with their own interests. The final objectives of the Honors Program are successful authorship of the honors thesis and graduation with honors or highest honors in the major.

Students apply to the Honors Program in the first semester of the junior year. Students meeting college and departmental requirements will enroll for a total of 12 credit hours: History 3980, Junior Honors Seminar in History (3 credit hours); History 4980–4981 Senior Honors Research Seminar (6 credit hours); and 4999, Senior Honors Thesis (3 credit hours). In addition, the Honors Program requires an oral defense of the honors thesis before a faculty committee at the end of the third semester.

Program of Concentration in Economics and History

This is an interdisciplinary program split between Economics and History that provides a more focused program of study while requiring fewer credit hours than a double major in the two fields. See the Economics and History section of this catalog for details.
Minor in History
The minor in history requires a minimum of 18 credit hours of course work in one area of concentration. No more than 3 credit hours of AP or IB credit may count toward this total. The following options are offered:

I. Asian History
Six of the courses listed under “Program A. Asia”

II. Latin American History
1. 1370 or 1380 and
2. Any five of the courses listed under “Program B. Latin America”

III. European History
1. 1350 or 1360 and
2. Five of the courses listed under “Program C. Europe”

IV. Early America and United States History
1. 1390, 1400, 1410, or 1420 and
2. Five of the courses listed under “Program D. Early America and the United States”

V. Middle East and Africa
1. Six of the courses listed under “Program E. Middle East and Africa”

VI. Global and Transnational
1. Six of the courses listed under “Program F. Global and Transnational”

VII. Science, Medicine, and Technology
1. Six of the courses listed under “Program G. Science, Medicine, and Technology,” among which no more than two may be courses outside the Department of History.

Course descriptions begin on page 198.

G. Science, Medicine, and Technology
1. Six of the courses listed under “Program G. Science, Medicine, and Technology,” among which no more than two may be courses outside the Department of History.
New Catalog Copy:

MORE than one hundred courses in the Department of History are available to Vanderbilt undergraduates. Some focus on a particular historical period, others on a particular region of the world, and still others on topics that may cross traditional chronological and geographical boundaries. The department is committed to the principle that in a changing world, the way we learn about the past must also change. It will continue to develop new courses for the twenty-first century, with an emphasis on those that recognize the interconnections among the various civilizations and regions of the globe.

Unless indicated otherwise in the course description, history courses have no prerequisite. Except for History 3980, 4960, 4980–4981, and 4999, courses numbered below 5000 are open to all majors and nonmajors. History 4960 is limited to seniors and juniors who have previously taken History 3000W. History 3980, 4980–4981, and 4999 are limited to students who have been admitted to the History Honors Program.

Students will find that the study of history offers not only a strong foundation for a liberal education but also a means of understanding the contemporary world. The skills developed in gathering, assessing, and synthesizing information have wide application in many careers, including business and the professions.

The Department of History offers a major and minor in history and, in cooperation with the Department of Economics, a joint major in economics and history, which is described in this catalog under Economics and History.

NOTE: New course numbers took effect in fall 2015. Former course numbers are included in course descriptions in this catalog and at this website: registrar.vanderbilt.edu/faculty/course-renumbering/course-lookup/.

Program of Concentration in History

The major program requires a minimum of 30 credit hours in history; no more than 3 credit hours of AP or IB credit may count toward this total. Note: AP and IB credit will not count toward the 15 credit hours for the concentration.

Course work is distributed as follows:

1. 3000W or 3980 (3 credit hours)
   Note: 3000W should be taken as soon as possible and must be taken no later than the second semester of the junior year. 3000W is a prerequisite for the 4960 capstone course. 3980 is limited to second-semester juniors who have been admitted to the Honors Program. Students entering the Honors Program who have already taken 3000W will receive elective credit for that course.

2. Five courses in one of the following concentrations (15 credit hours):
   A. Asia
   B. Latin America
   C. Europe
   D. Early America and the United States
   E. Middle East and Africa
   F. Global and Transnational
   G. Science, Medicine, and Technology
   H. Comparative History/Special Topics

   See below for a list of courses that count for Concentrations A, B, C, D, E, F, and G. Students choosing concentration H must have the approval of their adviser and the director of undergraduate studies for a specific program of study. First-Year Writing Seminars (1111) in history may be used to satisfy the relevant program concentration with approval of the director of undergraduate studies.

   Note: Please consult the director of undergraduate studies for approval of “as appropriate” courses in concentration areas.

3. Capstone course (3–6 credit hours)
   One of the following, to be taken in the junior or senior year; all of the options will require the student to write a major paper. Any capstone course within the student’s area of concentration will count toward the five-course requirement for that concentration.

   Option 1: 3883, Internship Research (3 credit hours).
   Must be taken in conjunction with 3880 (internship training). Prerequisite: 3000W. Note: a student may take 3883 as an elective before completing 3000W but in this case 3883 will not count as a capstone course.

   Option 2: 4960, Majors Seminar (3 credit hours).
   Prerequisite: 3000W.

   Option 3: 4980–4981, Senior Honors Seminar (6 credit hours).
   Limited to seniors in the History Honors Program. Note: At the discretion of the director of honors and the director of undergraduate studies, a student who has taken 4980 but does not take 4981 may be considered to have fulfilled the capstone requirement for the major.

4. Electives (6–12 credit hours, depending on the nature of the capstone course)

Honors Program
The Honors Program in History is a three-semester program of study. It offers superior undergraduate history majors a program of advanced reading, research, and writing. The Honors Program combines seminar work and independent study under the supervision of a thesis adviser. This structure provides participants an introduction to historical research and writing, as well as the opportunity to study defined areas of history and significant historical problems that accord with their own interests. The final objectives of the Honors Program are successful authorship of the honors thesis and graduation with honors or highest honors in the major.

   Students apply to the Honors Program in the first semester of the junior year. Students meeting college and departmental requirements will enroll for a total of 12 credit hours: History 3980, Junior Honors Seminar in History (3 credit hours); History 4980–4981 Senior Honors Research Seminar (6 credit hours); and 4999, Senior Honors Thesis (3 credit hours). In addition, the Honors Program requires an oral defense of the honors thesis before a faculty committee at the end of the third semester.

Program of Concentration in Economics and History
This is an interdisciplinary program split between Economics and History that provides a more focused program of study while requiring fewer credit hours than a double major in the two fields. See the Economics and History section of this catalog for details.

Minor in History
The minor in history requires a minimum of 18 credit hours of course work in one area of concentration. Of these 18 credit hours, no more than 6 credit hours may be earned in courses outside the Department of History. No more than 3 credit hours of AP or IB credit may count toward this total. Note: Please consult the director of undergraduate studies for approval of History courses listed as “as appropriate” in concentration areas. The following options are offered:

A. Asia
   Six of the courses listed under “Program A. Asia”

B. Latin America
   1. 1370 or 1380 and
2. Any five of the courses listed under “Program B. Latin America”

C. Europe
